All patient enquiries are triaged by a doctor or paramedic in the first instance. We offer an online service to save you time waiting in the phone queue and to enable you to inform your GP in your own words of your healthcare concern or medical needs.

A doctor or our paramedic will assess patient requests based on clinical need. Following assessment you may be offered a same day telephone consultation or face to face consultation with the health professional best placed to care for your healthcare needs, or a future appointment within six weeks. We may also be able to help you in other ways, for example by texting a link with further information to the right service for your healthcare needs.

If you feel that you need to be assessed by a GP the same day, please submit requests by 11am.

CONFIDENTIALITY

In common with all UK general practices, your records are stored electronically in our computer system. Rigorous safeguards are employed to prevent unauthorised access to stored information and your rights are fully covered by the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) 2018. NHS England has access to certain parts of the system in order to obtain data for audit and management purposes; however, this excludes access to any information which identifies any individual by name. The Freedom of Information Act 2000 allows you access to any records we hold about you.

We appreciate that in a rural community you may have family or friends who work at the practice, we have strict confidentiality policies which all staff work to and respect.

ACCESS TO PATIENT INFORMATION

Everyone working for the NHS has a legal duty to keep information about you confidential.

You may be receiving care from other organisations as well as the NHS (like Social Services). We may need to share some information about you so we can all work together for your benefit. We will only ever use or pass on information about you if others involved in your care have a genuine need for it. We will not disclose your information to third parties without your permission unless there are exceptional circumstances, such as when the health or safety of others is at risk or where the law requires information to be passed on.

Anyone who receives information from us is also under a legal duty to keep it confidential.

We are required by law to report certain information to the appropriate authorities. This is only provided after formal permission has been given by a qualified health professional.

Our guiding principle is that we are holding your records in strict confidence.

WHY WE COLLECT INFORMATION ABOUT YOU

Your doctor and other health professionals caring for you keep records about your health and any treatment and care you receive from the National Health Service. These help ensure that you receive the best possible care from us. They may be written down (manual records), or held on a computer. The records may include:

- Basic details about you, such as address and next of kin.
- Contacts we have had with you, such as surgery visits.
- Notes and reports about your health and any treatment and care you have received.
- Results of investigations, such as x-rays and laboratory tests.
- Relevant information from other health professions, or those who care for you and know you well.

Your records are used to guide professionals in the care you receive to ensure that your doctor, nurse or any other healthcare professionals involved in your care has up-to-date information to assess your health and decide what care you need. Full information is available if you see another doctor, or are referred to a specialist or another part of the NHS, there is a good basis for assessing the type and quality of care you have received and your concerns can be properly investigated if you need to complain.

Your information may also be used to help us: assess the needs of the general population, make sure our services can meet patient needs in the future; review the care we provide to ensure it is of the highest standard, teach and train healthcare professionals, conduct health research and development and to audit NHS accounts and services.

HOW YOU CAN ACCESS YOUR OWN HEALTH RECORDS

The General Data Protection Regulations 2018 allows you to find out what information is held on computer and in your manual records. If you wish to see your records, please speak to the Receptionist for further details as an appointment is required. You should also be aware that in certain circumstances your right to see some details in your health records may be limited in your own interest or for other reasons.
